For over 50 years, Margaret Sanger led a battle for unrestricted and widespread use of contraception. She promised that it would result in happiness, freedom, and fulfillment. Her opposition came primarily from one source: The Catholic Church. Pope Paul VI, in his 1968 encyclical, Humanae Vitae (On Human Life), argued that contraception would lead only to enslavement, abuse, and heartache.

Who was right? Come watch the film and join in the discussion.
